

Estate Sales & Household Transitions

Our Customers Speak . . .

From Olivia in Greensboro, NC. I was faced with the challenge of selling anything and everything from a house of a relative before it is to be torn down. The problem was digging out what could sell while making the house presentable enough to properly show off some pretty nice furnishings.

Not only had the house been closed up for months, but the main floor joist in the living room was collapsing, causing a huge bow in the floor. Also, the house sat on a very busy street, and so close the driveway was almost swallowed by the street. We knew the attached garage held some nice things, but it was packed to the ceiling making it impossible to determine what was in it. And, no telling what might be living in there!

The Next Chapter team accepted the challenge with a smile, and went to work. They emptied the garage, organized the house, and made everything look wonderful! In fact, I was amazed at the end result. And, from what I understand, so were the customers who visited the sale.

